Gaze (eye contact)
Touch
Quality time

According to Gary Chapman, there are 5 languages of love which people use to express their love. One or two are usually more important than others to feel the affection from our partner.

I have added two others which I believe deserve a legitimate place on that list.

Do you know your own language of love, the one through which you feel more loved and the one you use to express your love? In previous relationships, is it possible that the lack of proper communication through your privileged channel was not found?
