

A vibrant daytime photograph of a mountain landscape. In the foreground, a calm lake reflects the surrounding green forested slopes. To the right, a dense stand of evergreen trees sits on a grassy hillside. In the background, majestic mountains rise, with the highest peaks and ridges bathed in the warm, golden light of the sun, contrasting with the clear blue sky.

— Day —
Perspective

A dark, atmospheric nighttime photograph of the same mountain landscape. The scene is mostly in shadow, with the lake's surface reflecting the faint light from the sky. The silhouettes of the forested slopes and the jagged peaks of the mountains are visible against a deep, dark blue night sky.

— Night —
Perspective

Believe it or not, the decor on the upper and lower part on the other side of this card are identical. Only the light has changed. We also experience night perspectives from time to time when we're tired, depressed, angry, sick or when we face an overwhelming situation. If you can't find someone to bring some light, make sure you just sit and wait for the daylight to come back. It will come back. Moving too much or too many things during the night perspective can only create more problems and get you completely lost. Take this time to rest, sure enough, the sun will come back and the next step to take will become evident.